History and Warranty

HISTORY

In a Great Depression rags-to-riches story, Ross D Siragusa sold his automobile and much of his furniture to start a fledgling consumer electronics company. He was just 26. By the early 1950's his company - ultimately to be known as The Admiral Corporation - was a full-line home appliance manufacturer, eventually becoming synonymous with refrigerators and freezers, cookers, microwaves, air conditioners, dehumidifiers, radios and TV's.

By 1974 the company had been credited with over 75 consumer innovations...including introducing millions of Americans to colour TV. New owners then continued to build on the company's US-wide reputation for innovation, quality, expertise...and value, integrating new brands and manufacturing facilities which could trace their origins back to the great inventor, Thomas A. Edison.

Today, Admiral continues to represent the qualities demanded, not just by its American customers, but by a rapidly growing worldwide audience which is increasingly focussed on style, value...and exceptional build quality.
